Project reflection:

Reflect on your process both from the creative side as well as from the tactical side for this app. What went well? What didn't go so well? What would you do differently next time?

I think what made this app fun for me to create was that I centered it on something that I am interested in. As a fan of Harry Potter, I really enjoyed designing the UI and functionality of my app with a Harry Potter theme. This app was simpler to develop than the iPhone app, I think because it was not my first app and I did not overextend my current abilities. I first got the functionality of the app working, and then I made it look nicer. That seemed to work very well so that I did not constantly have to redesign elements to work with my code. I think the most difficult thing I did with this app was set up the landscape variants. This was my first time doing that and I had to fight with the elements on my app to get them placed where I wanted them so that the app would still be readable. I am really happy with how my app turned out and the process of creating it.
